The damage done to the trees was estimated by one witness at 510.

PEEL RIVER.

[PROM OUR CORNESSONDENT.]

BOWLING ALLIEV POINT, 23rd November.—I am earry to say that we have had a very dry spring and summor in this quarter, since the middle of September there has not been a shower until last Friday might, when we had about an hour's rain; it has revived the crops slightly, but there was far too little of it to do any amount of good. The river is slightly up, but it cannot last for more than a few days. The gardens and crops around here are in a bad state from drought, and also from the ravages of the grub and caterpillar. Potatoes have suffered most severely from the latter pest; maise has also been greatly run upon by them, and even the Bathurst burr, while young and tender, has been fairly eaten to the ground, and it would have been well if they had confined their operations to the latter nuisance. According to present appearances this will be a very bad ecason for the settlers, even should rain come now, of which at the present time there are but small indications, I fear it will be too late to save the crops, and I believe there is more ground under cultivation in this quarter than ever there has been in any previous season.

Alluvial mining is rather stack, on account of the scarrity of water, there are still a few parties obtaining a small supply, but even that cannot last over two weeks at the farthest without rain. Some parties have set into the bed of the river during last week. There is much ground there that has never yet been turned up, in fact, very fittle of it has been wrought on any systematic plan. Owing to the heavy amount of labour it takes to cut a tail race, and the uncertainty of the seasons, the river is not in favour among the miners here.

Seme of the quarte claims on Foley's Folly still turn out well. Indeed it is the centre of attraction in quarty mining on this field now. I hope the worth of the quarte rest on the Peel River will be fairly tested before long.

John D. Davis and Co. are now creeting a powerful crushing machine at the base of the hil expectation of striking the junction of the reefs—it is a heavy undertaking: I hope they may succeed to their highest expectations.

Here we are again, in a district with a large population, with not a usedical man mearer to us than Tamworth, a distance of thirty miles. I may say that for the last twolve meaths there has been very lucrative employment for a properly qualified medical man in this quarter. The professional gentleman we had till lately was an active man in the prime of life, but he died a few days ago somewhat suddenly, consequently there is now a good opening for an active steady man of the medical profession. If a toetotaler, so much the better.

Reports from the Lachlan Gold-fields are causing some little stir here, although few have as yet started for them. I do not for a moment doubt that a rich and permanent gold-field has been struck, but when the report goes that the lead is 200 yards in width, and so very rich at that, it staggers one a belief completely. Why if such were the case, Ballarat, with its contracted insignificant leads, would be but as a mere patch to the Lachlan. But putting such exaggerations asside, it will and must do a large amount of good to the colony, which I am serry to say was getting down to a very depressed state indeed.

It is surprising to see the grass still keeping tolerably green after such a stretch of dry weather—yet such is the case. There is still abundance of feed for cattle around here.

day. We have lately given publicity to various calculations tending to show that England afords a good minimum price for the wheat of South Anstralia, as from the peculiar qualities of that wheat it will always command much higher rates than the best samples of English growth. We fear, however, that the outlet thus indicated will scarcely be available to growers in the remote districts of the province, and under the most favourable circumstances the exportation of wheat to England—taken in connection with the present rates of labeur—will only be to the farmer what the melting-pot is to the squater, a means of reducing loss rather than of making profit. If, however, wheat can be raised a little more chesply, no doubt the English market will constitute a sate outlet for our surplus produce, and most sincerely do we bego that the anticipations entertained on this head may be realized. The total declared yield of the last wheat harvest was 3.576,083 bushels. If we take the average population of 1861 at 130,000, and allow 7 bushels per head as the equivalent of the year's consumption, 910,000 bushels will be thus absorbed. Last year's wheat harvest was grown upon 273,672 acres, this year well estimate it at 300,000 acres, for which, at 14 bushel per acre, 450,000 bushels will be total quantity available for exportation during the whole of 1861. In this calculation we have not included the stocks of old wheat on hand at the commencement of the season following. Taking the ordinary quality of four prepared for exportation at forty-five bushels to the ton of 2000 lbs., the exportable surplus of the harvest of 1860 would represent 49,257 tons of four. The exports from all ports of the province during the first two quarters ending September 30th last, are as follow—

Quarter ending June 30-Wheat, 25,400 quarters from Jure 20th ditto ditto Bran, 1,211 loss.

Ditto ditto ditto Bran, 1,211 loss.

Ditto ditto ditto Bran, 1,104 tons.

Estimating the flour above exported an equal to forty-five bushels per ton, the total wheat give you the following paragraph, and at the same time treely confess that I hold the same opinion entertained by the class of people I refer to.

"The fact of the decrease of weight of salmon in fresh water, coupled with the circumstance of no food being found in its stomach, although in the stomach of all the non-migratery varieties of this fish inhabiting the same river, whether they are caught by book or by crook, by leister or by net, is found in every stage of digestion, abundance of food, has led many of the most intelligent practical salmon fishers—men who breach, bed off I may use the term), kill, and sell the fish, and who pay for this privilence enormous rentals (one with whom I am acquainted has paid for many years for the fisheries leased by him an annual rental of £23,000. I mean Hogarth, of Aberdeen)—to infer that the values does not cut in fresh rester, but subsists during the ten months it is in the river on the fat which it has accumulated by its eight weeks' banquet ent its marine feeding grounds.

If our legiclators will consider, perhaps they will arrive at the conclusion that it is no more remarkable for salmon to exist without food for ten months than it is for them to increase their weight and dimensions some hundredfold in the course of five weeks, which is a well-ascertained fact. Netther are there wanting in the animal kingdom analoguase examples. But these examples are more numerous in the Butterfly department of that kingdom, which, if I am rightly informed, comes more within the peculiar province of Mr. W. S. Macleay. I shall point to the bear as an illustration of my meaning. Bruin, not without cause, is assumed to be a wisanthropic animal, very unsocial in his habits, and apt to growd on slight occasions. He is a cunning, cautious beast for all that, and makes hay while the summer an shines, becomes fat, and retires to a hellow tree of a superious which have a regard for their personal experience, vouch for the truth of the above statement, inastruch as I have on several occasion pies that the example has been set them, and that it is their only means of compensation for injuries inflicted. Notwithstanding the antagenistic feeling that unfortunately exists between employers and employed, the opposition to the introduction of machinery is simply an idea, and has not any existence in the minds of the intelligent class of mechanics.

The statements given by Dr. Watts to show the great losses that workmen have to submit to during a dispute, although one-sided, are to some extent true. It is but fair that the percentage upon that portion of the labour which, although in the particular trade disputing, yet is not in the dispute, should be taken into consideration.

By way of illustration, we will suppose that there are 40,600 builders employed, 10,000 of this number have a notice of ten per cent, reduction, they decline to accept the terms, or, to use the more familiar but erroneous term, they strike, and after three months' struggle are successful—it is truthat the 10,000 have lost the three months' wages, but the 10,000 had accepted the reduction a similar notice would have been given to the 30,000, as it would be abourd to expect one employer to pay 10 per cent, as it is evident if the 10,000 that content of the statements of Dr Watts are by no means according to facts: but it must be confessed, even looking at disputes in their most favourable light, that they are great evils, but unfortunately in all cases cannot be avoided.

looking at disputes in their most favourable light, that they are great evils, but unfortunately in all cases cannot be avoided.

The great cause of all disputes is without doubt the question of wages, and it is indeed a difficult one to satisfactorily arrange even by "courts of arbitration." Ought the working classes to be satisfied with just sufficient to live upon in my humble opinion they ought not. Is it just because in England the great mass of the population are in no better position than slaves that in all new colonias the working classes should labour for an amount just anticient to keep starvation from the deer, to enable capital to compete with Knyland in manufactures? It is not just. The question then arises, how is the capital of the colonies to be invested. By means of a protective duty but, at the same time not prohibitory) upon all manufactured articles of any kind that may be produced in the colonies; but it would be wise, in the najority of cases, to admit the raw material free of all duty. Such a system of protection would, in a great measure, prevent disputes.

It is considered a great hardship by the working classes to be induced to leave England under the misrepresentation of lecturers paid by the Government, and on their arrival to find that the Government who invited them to come to a better position are doing all in their power to injure that position by having nearly all the work required for the colony imported. Consider for a moment the great injustice the Messrs. Parkes and Dalley are inflicting upon the working classes of England and these colonies. Their questions as to the wages paid to the mechanics of different trades exceed the actual amount paid by about three shillings per day: this I know, from considerable enquiry; the average wages paid to shilled labour of all kinds being least that one shilling per hour. Suppose a number of mechanics are induced to leave England through the fattering accounts of these lecturers, can they be blanned for expressing disastifaction on their

THE RESOURCES OF INDIA.—OUR COTTON SUPPLIES.

THE RESOURCES OF INDIA.—OUR COTTON SUPPLIESS.

(From the Times, September 18.)

The following communication on the question of the cotton supply contains some valuable statements regarding the requires of India in that respect, and suggests a made by which, in the opinion of the writer, the possibility of a deprivation of this staple might be averaged. If the Indian producer could be some of present prices there would be no doubt of sufficient quantities being raised, and the proposities is that for one season the Imperial Government might undertake the responsibility of furnishing that security. But, although there is nothing in this but what may be considered fairly to come within the scope of discussion, since it is perfectly legitimate for a Government to attempt to confront a national emergency, the crisis is, after all, not of sinch magnitude or uncertainty as to be beyond control or mitigation by ordinary means. The low price of cottem goods, and the largeness of the stocks held at nearly all the markets of the world, may well reconcile us to a pause in the rate of production; and although during this pause the contingency may have to be met of supporting a large unemployed population, the cost in that respect will be in no small degree compensated by the rise in the value of the goods is question. At the same time, each account we receive from distant parts tends to show how werey available bale from countries capable of producing the plant is likely to find its way to us. Moreover, although the Confederate States still assert that they will meet the blockade of the enemy by a self-imposed blockade, and not allow a pound of cotton to leave their territory, it is seen that this declaration does not harmonise with the last news—that at the taking of the Hatterss forts a vessel fully laden with cotton was found waiting to run out and evade the Federal crusers. From Texts, therefore, a moderate supply is still expected. The great argument, however, for abstilled the production of super. The production of th

American cotton being the arbiter of our destinics, our cumancipation from all need of it is, perhaps, simply a question of £8,000,000 or £9,000,000 sterling:

Sir,—The most important question of the present day is, bryond a deably, the supply of cotton for the United Kingdom for next year. Deprecating any Government interference with commercial transactions, or victation of the laws of free trade, I would beg to be allowed to ask whether, as on that supply depend the vital interests of this country, the whole contingent circumstances affecting it will not justify us in discussing, as a question altogether exceptional, the propriety of Government intervening, on the assumption that we do not receive the American crop, and that India is the only country which can supply the deficit.

From some experience of the capabilities of India for the production of cotton I am induced to believe that, were importers certain of the existing price of East India cotton being maintained, we should receive thence a supply equal to all our requirements. The improved means of transport by railway in India are greatly in its lavour, and the high prices would soon cause a divergence of the greater portion of the present large export to China to this country. The quantity to be exported from India dependately on the price. The present price of Rest India cotton is 70 to 80 per cent, above the average. With a minimum guarantee for present prices, we might, I think, import from India for next year from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 belies, £1,000,000 sterling.

The points for consideration are—list, would the cortainty of existing prices holding good for Rast India cotton insure our getting a supply for next year, as per the above estimate?

2. Is it probable that importers and manufacturers, without a certainty of each minimum price, and of banks ready to negotiate their bills, will be found to ship 17 millions sterling?

3. Would Government be justified, under the extremely exceptional circumstances of the case, as resting on the American America that we are not so dependent on her for raw cottous as she imagines.

The despotic Government of the Emperor of the French is no guide for ours; but it is believed by some that on the deliciency in the French harvest being ascertained, the Government granted to importers of grain a minimum guaranteed price, and within two months they secured 5,000,000 quarters of grain, while at the present moment inpwards of 700 vessels are loading or in the course of transit to France with the grain.

Government might reply that this is a matter with which the public at large have nothing to do, and simply amanufacturers and importers question. But I apprehead that should the supply unfortunately fail there is no class in this country but will find itself materially affected. A minor question might arise whether a guarantee by Government of a minimum price for East India cotton should be extended to supplies from other countries, the aggregate of which is by no means important.

The guarantee to operate in this wise —All importers of cotton would have to declare, on arrival of the ship at home, whether they will take the Government price or self in the market. Should the American crop not come forward the present price of East India cotton, at all events, would be maintained, importers would self in the open market, und the guarantee would be disregarded. If the American crop came forward, on the other hand, the whole Indian expert would be thrown on the hands of the Government, and their loss would be a difference between the guaranteed price they had paid for the cotton and the price to be realised on a sale, to be arranged for according to samples how to be settled.

In staing that India could give us 2,000,000 bales of cotton, it do not overlook the large area of land required for that it do not overlook the large area of land required for that

HINTS AND WARNINGS

HINTS AND WARNINGS.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Bia.—A few days since I accidentally became passessed of a copy of The Staamer Bulletift, published in San Francisco, on the 20th July. It contains a fortnight's news compiled for transmission to the Atlantic States and Europe, and I think a few extracts from it will be arausing to your readers; and particularly instructive as shewing the natural tendencies of pure unadulterated democratism.

And first, a few words on the management of two great institutions—the customs and the mint.

tireat complaints are made of the charges of "drayage," which under certain circumstances is undertaken by the department, and which it is distinctly stated are three times the amount of the usual prices. "No wonder (says the Bulletin) Mrs. Lincoln's cousin was willing to accept the drayage of our port if such rates were to rule. But collector Rankin from the start reformed all this. He reduced the charge of fifty per cent, and established the rate at seventy-five cents per load of one ton—which, mean as it must seem to those who rollicked in the drippings of the J. B. Administration, is still very good.

But the next charge against the department is one seventy-five cents per lock of the ton-which, nextas it must seem to those who rollicked in the drippings of the J. B. Administration, is still very good psy."

Hut the next charge against the department is one of downright plunder. Under the pretence of testing goods, the Appraisers appear to levy black mail.
Several instances are given.

P. Many, jun, received lastly 600 baskets of champagne, of which exty-two baskets were ordered to the appraisers. There every basket was opened (it costs twenty-five extate a basket to have them fastened again) and from each basile of champagne, of the sevent has been of the sevent of the sevent has been created the situation of the sevent of the sevent of the sevent of the

for the sevent of the sevent of the sevent of the sevent of the earth could they do with skety-two bottles of champagne if they were all opened in a day! One wonders where these gentlemen here their private cellars, and what are in them.

Another importer wholl subtract to the appraisers. When he each held of them again, each case had been opened, and from such one bottle was missing. This was an article that would not be ruined by having the bottlee opened, but they did not jut them back again. The importer thought be could scarcely afford the less, and cent as order to the appraiser for the missing bottles. In response he was answered that it was enstomary in the Adamte poor to the same transport of the missing bottles. In response he was answered that it was enstomary in the Adamte poor to the same transport of the missing bottles. In response he was answered that it was enstomary in the Adamte over opened and past ot their to ensure and to the ease and cent as order to the appraisers. He moreover has be offered the same transport of the same and the sevent of the ease had the head of the department, and mobile the for sales were then invited to explain. They tild so cheerfully: they senfissed that they had tested the channagene, and had been very merry over it, but as they were "dead broke" they must throw themselves on the mercy of the sufferers; and the appeal was the rain.

A number of letters are published, and in the last of them the new Inspector of Customs states that the appraisers declare they have only been following the "uage" of their department, but they are willing to make arrangements which will be "attisfactory to impertern." The editor concludes his article in a moralizing tone:—

Men (says he) cannot live by strink alone. If the champagne suffers so scribbaly at their hands, how will it be with the pic fruits, the sardines, the pickles, the inecous cannot meats? Then eating and drinking is not the whole of "life." Won't the tamilies of the ine want favt, and laces, and pieces of fine silk, and extra broadcloths.' And where is it to stop! Some honest body will come at last be held no better than a their, the samilies of the ine want favt, and laces, and pieces have become helicus; and as this is the first, let it be the last of this sort of thing to be recorded under the rule of men who went into office disposed to do right and not in over hasto be rich.

With respect to the Mint, there is a case which illustrates the manner in which patronage is used. It must be remembered that the new administration is now enjoying the "spoila" of office, putting its own supporters into office everywhere. A man who had been a labourer was put into the assay office. The ecomplaint of Mr. Harte against the assayer involved to some extent the construction of the laws establishing the Branchage is used. It must be remained of the Case:—

The complaint of Mr. Harte against the assayer involved to some extent the construction of the laws establishing the Branchage is the remained of the Case:—

The ecomplaint of Mr. Harte against the assayer involved to some extent the construction of the laws establishing the Branchage and empl Probably a parallel to this case has never been seen in the Daited States. Here is a Grand Jury presenting their own presiding Judge—the man who empanseled them—for drunkenness during their term. The jury say they are "compelled to notice the insertiate state is which the preciding officer of the Court of Sessions was during their term." We can well helieve that they were compelled—for we all can conceive the unwillingness with which a firmal Jury would take cognisance of such a matter, and how readily they would have passed over, it, if the Judge was not merely "tiph," or a little therefore, the compelled of the complex of the language "during their empanee." The complex of the language "during their empanee." The complex of the form Jury is too explicit to Judge with having been intoxinated during the session of the Court to disqualifying and "outrageous" extent. The reader must been in mind that Joel T. Landrum was the County Judge in question.

Judge with having been intoniated during the session of the Court to a disqualifying and "outraprequa" extent. The reader must beer in mind that Jeef T. Landrum was the County Judge in question.

A fearful amount of crime, especially of the higher descriptions, is recorded, but, although some of it is of a purely American character, yet, considering the nature of the population of a gold-digging country, it would be unfair to attribute it to the political institutions of the State.

There is, however, one amusing incident worthy of a record. "A Governor" pitching into a political opponent is, even in America, I imagine, a rare occurrence. The facts, as gathered by the Bulletin from an eye-witness, who observed them from the Middle-ton aspect, are as follows:—

The facts, as we can obtain them, from an eye-witness who observed them from the Middle-ton shown and John Middleton stood together on the side-walk of Marignoner;—secret, if front of Middleton, ascition room, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Governor Dowacy and Miles Sweney were exen together approaching. With that, Governor Downey stung with what he evidently took for a deliberate insuit, whatever it was meant for, and as if to show that, Governor Downey at the same and the same in the same and same and the sam

Folice Court opened this morning both parties had expressed their desire not to prosecute, and, with costs, Judge Cowies dismissed the cases.

We are assured by a gentleman who saw the whole of the edifying spectacle that Governor Downey did not draw a Derringer, as was reported—that he struck one quick blow as if not be, but his involuntary muscles did it; that though obviously nettled from his start, he was conducting himself as "the first gentleman of a suddenly rushed from his heart to his flat, and hed to the deeply regretted assuit; that, moveover, Middleton did not insult the Governor with the "lie," as has been reported—the sting of his remarks lay in that word "tight," to which Middleton was provoked after he had withstood about the worst taunt a San Franciscan recognises, that of being called a "Bulkheader."

The next is an amusing paragraph:

THE REPRESENTATION OF MINORITIES.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Six.—In the following letter, I have endeavoured to pack Mr. Mill's chapter on the Representation of Minorities into a compass that will not frighten newspaper readers. Doing so has taken considerably both from the beauty of the style and the strength of the argument: in fact I feel like a man who has been chipping down a fire statue to get it into a small box. If I might venture to suggest it, the entire chapter would be well worth reprinting. If you think otherwise, the annexed condensation is entirely at your service to print or to throw aside as you may judge best. Its perusal might benefit those who may not have read the work itself, and in the hope that your approving notice of his views may dispose the public to give them an impartial consideration; more especially as you have recently drawn attention to the favourable the rest can compel all the others to adopt its nominee; and this superior pertinacity is unhappily more likely to be found among those who are holding out for their own interest than for that of the public. That while recognizing these evils many should consider them as the necessary price paid for a free Government, is in no way surprising; it was the opinion of all the friends of freedom up to a recent period. But the habit of passing them over as irremediable has become so inveterate that many persons seem to have lost the capacity of looking at them, as things which they would be glad to remedy if they could; yet, nothing is more certain than that the virtual blotting out of the minority is no necessary or natural consequence of freedom; that, so far from having any connexion with democracy, it is diametrically opposed to its first principle, representation in proportion to numbers. Various expedients to meet the evil have been proposed, the best of which is that of Mr. Marshall, that each elector should have the same number of votes as there are members for his constituency, and be allowed to bestow them all on the same number of votes as there are members for his constituency, and be allowed to bestow them all con the same candidate, or distribute them among the candidates in any way he may choose, this would secure the representation of all local minorities sufficiently considerable to return a single member, but all less considerable to return a single member, but all less considerable be ninorities and all minorities, however numerous, made up of several constituencies, would still remain unrepresented. Any further degree of perfection was deemed unattainable until the appearance of Mr. Hare's scheme.

He proposes to ascertain the quota of electors cutiled to have a member to themselves by dividing the number of votes in the country by the number of seats in the House; and every candidate in whatever part of the country he presented himself, each elector would be at liberty to vote for any candidate i full quota of votes, these seats would, of course, tall to the candidates ranking highest on the list.

The following is Mr. Milla' view of the advantages presented by Mr. Hare's plan:—First, it secures a representation in proportion to numbers of every section of the electoral body large enough to be entitled to a representative; secondly, every elector would be represented by the man whom he had chosen out of the whole country, while all that is valuable in the local character of the representation would be retained, for the electors would always continue to prefer a candidate having the same local views and interests as themselves, whenever an eligible one offered; and, thirdly, the instructed minorities scattered throughout the constituencies would combine together to return a few of the very best and ablest men in the country, and thus greatly benefit the Legislature.

Such is a brief and imperfect outline of Mr. Mill's views; those who are not disposed to entertain Mr. Hare's plans may, perhaps, be ready to adopt Mr. Marshall's, which would be a considerable step in the right direction.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.

To the Editor of the Herald.

No. V.

Sin,—The remuneration due to teachers is a subject on which much theoretical, but very little practical liberality has been exercised of late years. It is but just to the National Board to state that, for some years past, they have devised measures, and perseveringly carried them out, for raising the qualifications, increasing the stipends, and officially recognising the merits of teachers in their service. It would appear that the administrators of the Denominational system have discovered the nacessity for pursuing a similar course, for we find in the Denominational Board's Report (Appendix C.) the belief expressed, "That unless a decently liberal scale of payment can be secured for our teachers, it is in vain to hope for the qualifications and the perseverance necessary for their important but ill-appreciated work." It may be interesting to your readers to compare this sound opinion with recent utterances on the same subject in England. Appended to the report of the Royal Commissioners on Education is an easy by Mr. Mathew Arnold, who is well-known as a poet, scholar, and Inspector of Schools. From that essay the following passage is extracted:—

M. Cuvier thought one of the grand causes of the success of the Dutch schools was the advantageous position of the schoolmasters. Municipalities and parvits were alike invorrable to them, and but of the first of the production of the schoolmasters. Municipalities and parvits were alike invorrable to them, and but of the first of the production of the schoolmasters. The fruits of this comfort and consideration were to be seen—as they are remarkably to be seen even at the present day—in the good manners, the good affers, the gold-respect without presumption, of the Dutch teachers; they are never service, and any of the present day in the good manners, the good affers, the gold-respect without presumption, of the Dutch teachers; they are never service, and preventing the good manners, the good actions. broidered on the collar: these public distinctions to the teacher are excellent, but they are of ne avail, so long as he is utterly underpaid.

Now, what is the state of things as regards the remuneration of teachers in this colony? From the report of the National Board, we learn that the average amount of emoluments received by their teachers from all sources is within a few shillings of £130 per annum and residence. In the absence of explicit information on this head in the Denominational Board's Report, we believe we have good ground for assuming that the average emolument of Denominational teachers is about £110 per annum, and dwelling-house. Part of the imputed expensiveness of the National System, as compared with the Denominational, is therefore, caused by doing what all competent judges affirm ought to be done—granting higher payments to teachers; while the relative cheapness claimed for the latter system since in some measure from the low rate of remuneration awarded to its agents. This fact, we conceive, places the advocates of that system in a dilemma. Either their teachers are underpaid, or they receive their full value, and their services are worth only the pittance accorded to them. In either case, what becomes of the cheapness of the system? We leave its friends to impale themselves on which horn of the dilemma they choose to select.

selves on which horn of the dilemma they choose to select.

Is it necessary to demonstrate that one large school can be more efficiently and less expensively managed than three or four small ones? And that the teachers shall be more equitably remunerated? For fear there may be some financial sceptics in the colony, we will endesvour to show how this may be. Let us suppose that in a country town there are 200 children of an age fit to go to school, and that the Demominational system is applied to the locality. Four schools would needlito be erected, furnished, supplied with apparatus and books, and placed in charge of masters. Let us further suppose that the teachers are skilled in their profession, and receive from the public treasury the not extravagant sum of £100 per annum each, so that £400 would be the yearly charge for salaries. That sum would be at least £140 per annum more than would be required to educate the children under the National Board would be these. The schools would be divided into three departments, presided over by the master who would take especial charge of the boys; the girls would be under a mistress, and the infants would be antivated to a junior female teacher. The expenditure for aslaries, supposing the teachers to be tolerably well qualified, would then be:—

Master £120 per annum
Mistress 80 "
Infant school teacher 60 "

ST. ANDREW'S CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of the Revald.

Sir.,—I crave space for a few words respecting the letter signed "John Bull," which appears in the Herald this morning.

Sin,—I crave space for a few words respecting the letter signed "John Bull," which appears in the Herald this morning.

The time when St. Andrew's Cathedral will be opened depends in a great degree upon the liberality of Churchmen throughout the diocese. I think, however, that there is reason to hope that by St. Andrew's Day, 1883 (two years hence), the committee will be in a position to pray for its consecration. Much delay has taken place during the last two years, in consequence of a claim that it should be looked upon as a parish church, and be managed by the parochial authorities; but that point being settled. I hope the work will go on, and if your correspondent will favour me with his same, I shall be glad to have his assistance at a public meeting, to be held in the autumn, at what I hope will be a final effort to raise money to complete the structure so far that it can be used.

In the mean time, it may be satisfactory to your readers to know that an order has gone to England for sufficient black and white marble to floor the entire building, and that it may be expected here about May next.

The cast window is to be a memorial to the late Bishop Broughton, and fer that an appeal will be made to the public about Christmas time. The west window is given by an old member of the committee, and all the windows in the nave and choir sicles are (with one ciception) provided for as gifts from various colonists as memorials to their deceased relatives. For many of these windows orders have already gone to England, and I hope by the next mail that for nearly all the remainder, orders will be sent by the December mails.

The clarestory windows have yet to be provided. One has been promined by a legal gentienus, and it is probable that several others will be given by the time they are wanted. The openings will be temporarily closed with committee are statistic that hey will be supficient to pay it.

The cost of the floor will probably be about £1000 (materials and labeur); about the same amount for

The account at the bank is in its chronic state—over-drawn—but the subscriptions promised will be sufficient to pay it.

The cost of the floor will probably be about £1000 (materials and labour); about the same amount for painting, clearing the walls, &c. Then the fittings. These, I expect, will be the work of years; but we must have another £1000 for a decent fitting up of the choir, temporary seats, &c., so that £3000, —a positive trifle when compared with the numbers interested—will enable us to worship in the first actual cathedral (that is, a church built expressly for the Bishop's chair) in the Australian colonies. There will still be a great deal to do, but the offerings at the opening services ought to be above £1000, which can supply ion railings, and external decorations. As for the completion of the towers, some of us have determined that as long as our means permit our subscriptions shall be continued, and (as soon as the building is occupied for worship) devoted expressly to that object.

We shall have also to devote our attention to the creation of a deanery and endovascents for canonyies; but for that we must wait until we get the Bean and Chapter incorporated, and let them manage their own matters. I hope they will be good beggars.

I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

Macquarie-strost, December 2nd.

MARIE, OR THE LITTLE QUEEN :

MARIE, OR THE LITTLE QUEEN;

AN HISTORICAL TALE OF FRENCH COLONIAL LITE.

BY MADAME CHARLES REYNAUD.

(Translated for the Sydney Mail, by Aramis.)

URAPHER THE LIST.

Two hours later, towards midnight, Marie, in the room which served as her prison, had not retired to rest. She was sitting by a little table on which lay her open prayer-book, and opposite to her stood Palida, leaning against the wall, apparently listening for any sound that might be audible from outside; but there was no sound perceptible except the wind which swept through the open bars of the window. An earthenware lamp partially lighted the apartment, which was situated immediately under the roof of the Harbour Stores, and had been hastily fitted up to serve as Marie's place of imprisonment. In the midst of the dim, shadowy gloom, the white and motionless figure of the Little Queen stood out in strong relief like a luminous apparition. She was reading, with her head bent forwards and her hands clasped together, and now and then she cast her eyes on the paper put before her by the side of a metal inkstand, like those which clerks and scholars then used to carry suspended from the waistband.

"Mistress," said Paida, raising her head, "I think I hear a sound below, as if somebody were coming this way."

"It is the sentry pacing up and down before the door; everybody else is asleep in this place," answered Marie.

"No, no, I heard some one speak," said the slave, getting up on a wooden bench which had been placed in front of the window, and trying to see what was going on outside; but she could see nothing except a light burning at ne great distance off, in the convent of the Jacobine Fathers. All was silent and descrede in the neighbourhood, for the harbour district was not then in existence, and the city of St. Pierre was little better than a large hamlet built under the walls of the fort. Suddenly a slight noise was heard on the other side of the door, and the key was turned softly in the look. "Matress!" cried Paidad, "they are opening the doo side of the door, and the key was turned softly in the lock. "Mistress!" cried Palida, "they are opening the door."

Marie's heart beat violently.

"At such an hour as this!" she murmured, "may God have mercy upon us. Who is it that can be coming now:"

The door was opened and shut to again quietly; the gaoler remained outside, and Loinvilliers came in. Marie had started up and, recognising the Count, rushed to the furthest extremity of the chamber, where she remained trembling, with her two hands resting on the shoulders of Palida. Loinvilliers threw a hasty glance round the prison, and his eyes met those of Marie with a bitter expression of joy. How often, in the cruel selfishness of his love, had he desired to see her thus; alone, humiliated, and berreft of all human aid! He thought that he had now overcome, if not the heart, at least the pride of this woman, whose deliverance then depended upon him, and as he went up to her he said, "Maddam, I am come to your assistance."

Madam, I am come to your assistance."
You?" she said hastily, with a gesture of doubt

"You?" she said hastily, with a gesture of doubter and almost of terror.

"Are you not aware of what is taking place," resumed he; "the rebels are masters of the fort and of the town; they have elected a new magistracy, and have chosen a fresh set of government officers. They have also drawn up a deed, by the terms of which you are to renounce the rights of yourself and of your son."

on".
"That deed is there," she replied, pointing to the paper on the table.

"They have brought it to you for signature, and "They have brought it to you for signature, and left it here. Just so."

"I will die here in this place, before I thus purchase either my liberty or my life."

"There is yet another way by which you may escape out of the hands of these wretches," cried Loinvilliers; "I have won over your guards, and my Spaniards will escort you to the banks of Monks' River. By daybreak we shall be safe at Mornes, and then, Marie, shall I tell you what I will do? I will muster all the freebooters of these islands, and my uncle the Baron de Poincy shall send me troops from St. Christopher's. With these united forces I will sttack the rebels, and treat them as I treated the Red Skins. Yes, Marie, you shall be avenged as you may desire. Trust, then, in me, and fellow me."

"No," said she, "for how am I to know what price you may not think proper to exact for this instance of your devotion:"

"A very high price, I am quite willing to confess."

" A very high price, I am quite willing to confess," that you will have to fulfil when you return here victoricus and amply avenged."

"Then I have no hope left to me but that in God," said she, looking down dejectedly; "Sir, I shall not saccompany you."

"Marie! in Heaven's name, in pity to yourself, do not say so," exclaimed Loinvilliers. "Come, come, time presses,—do you then hate me worse than death! These wretches will kill you, and who is there that can save you but I? What succour can you possibly expect here in this island, separated by the pathless ocean from all the rest of the world?"

Marie resumed her seat, and, turning away her head, made a sign to Loinvilliers to leave her. Then it was that he threw himself upon his knees, and spoke to her long in transports of love, and rage—with threats and with passionate entreaties; but she remained unshaken. The Count quitted her at length, in despair at her refusal, but resolved, nevertheless, to effect her deliverance.

The situation of the Little Queen was indeed terrible; the authers of the rebellion were too greatly compromised not to be compelled to go even to the greatest extremities, should Marie still persist in declining to sign the act which would formally invest them with authority. But they were dogged everywhere by Loinvilliers, who gave them so much trouble that they were unable to attain to that which they desired. He exercised a secret power over the captains of the parishes, who already perceived with anxiety the difficulties of the newly-established Government; he used all the well-nigh irresistible influence of the elergy over the lower classes, and himself openly called for Marie to be set at liberty. Nevertheless the Little Queen continued to be kept in imprisonment and well guarded. No intelligence respecting her was allowed to transpire, nor could Loinvilliers himself a second time succoed in gaining admission to her presence. One day at length the door of her prison opened, and she saw Doctor Jansen enter; the poor man was pale and dimayed.

"Oh, my old friend," cried she, with tears i

"Holy Mother?" cried Marie, "they are going to fight."

A few minutes of anguish and cruel expectation followed, during which the noise seemed to be coming nearer and nearer.

"They are coming to set us free, Madame," said the destree.

"They are coming to set us free, Madame," said the deoters."
Almost immediately the door was thrown open, and Loisvillies made his appearance before them at the health of the comment of rover, what a prey? Come, let us go and join our pirate friends,—those who are to give me back this Little Queen."

In the ocean which separates the two worlds there are invisible tracks, which the navigator knows how to find and how to follow; there are beacons, as it were, all along the midst of the waters, past which glide the ships that furrow the deep. Juan de Mata, captain of the Santiago, knew well what were the latitudes in which he ought to look out for the St. Nicholas, of Bordeaux, and, about a month after the departure of Marie, the pirate was cruising in the Bermuda Passage. The Santiago was a light schooner, armed with cannon, and manned with a crew collected from the four quarters of the globe, but of which the majority were Spaniards. During the fifteen days' cruise they had fallen across two or three vessels, which Captain Juan de Mata would willingly have boarded, but that Loinvilliers obliged him to forbear.

The weather was calm; soft and variable puffs of wind barely suffed the immense space, in the midst of which rested the schooner, like a white spot upon a wide-spreading sheet of blue velvet. Loinvilliers scarcely quitted the deck; leaning against the bulwarks, with his eyes fixed on the horizon, he did his best to see whether any sail could be seen upon the dim blue line in the distance; he waited with a sullen and cruel impatience for the favourable wind that was to bring his victim to him. One day, at length, the lock-out cried "A Sail?"—and a ship could soon be distinctly seen, which, from its awkward mode of sailing and clumay rigging, was recognised as the St. Nicholas, of Bordeaux. Then the joy of the crew manifested itself in cries and terrible maledictions; they prepared themselves for the fight as if for a fete, for no resistance was anticipated. The Count de Loinvilliers took Juan de Mata, and spoke to him apart.

"Our agreement, you know," said he, "is that you and your men are to have the whole cargo, and that I am to have Madame d'Enambuc. You are to take me with her to som

"On board! on board!" cried Juan de Mata.

The schooner drew alongside the St. Nicholas, and the pirates rushed on to her deek, each with a dagger between his teeth, a hatchet in one hand, and a pistol in the other. There was a momentary confusion but no fighting, for the merchant ressel was wholly unarmed. Whilst the pirates were overpowering the captain and the crew, Loinvilliers went down the main hatchway. Entering the cabin, the first person he met was Dr. Jansen.

"Sir," cried he, "all resistance is useless; we are masters of the ship. Where is Madame d'Enambuc!"

are masters of the ship. Where is Madame d'Rnambuc!"

The doctor threw open the door of one of the aftercabins, and said very quietly,

"She is there."

The open portholes gave light and air to that narrow space, in one corner of which Palida was sitting down on the deck with her face resting upon her hands. In the midst of the cabin was a long, narrow hands. In the midst of the cabin was a long, narrow case, over which a black cloth had been thrown.

"Dead?" cried Loinvilliers, stopping short, as if struck by lightning."

"She is dead," said the doctor. "I could not save her, she had suffered so much."

"Tske off that pall," said Loinvilliers, wildly, "take it away and open the shroud. I tell you I must see her."

"It would be a profanation," said the doctor, recoiling with horror. "Is the name of Heaven, my lord, leave these holy remains in peace?"

"I choose to see her!" said Loinvilliers with a menacing air.

The doctor drew back the cloth with a trembling hand and opened the coffin. His art had preserved those melancholy remains. She looked as if she were asleep,—her head enshrined in her long hair, and her hands clasped together upon a crucifix. Count Loinvilliers threw himself upon his knees, and two tears, the first he was ever known to shed, ran down his cheeks, and he cried, in horrible despair, "Marie! Marie! gone, gone for ever!"

"She forgave you in her last moments," said the Boctor." She revended for an extended to the contraction of the loctor."

Marie! gone, gone for ever!"

"She forgave you in her last moments," said the Doctor; "she prayed for you, even you, whose ill-omened leve filled her life with bitterness and with grief. Now then, at least, permit me to accomplish her last wishes; let me take away to France the sad remains, and hand them over to her husband the Marquess de Maubray."
"Her husband?" cried the Coust, starting up with sullen fury. "Then she was his wife?"
"Yes. She was married to him privately at Martinique."

"Yes. She was married to him privately at Martinique."

Loinvilliers stopped him there, and kept him silent by an imperious and angry gesture: then, becoming once more apparently calm and master of himself, he summoned Juan de Mata. The pirate turned pale and stopped short in some consternation when he saw the dead woman in her open coffin, beside which Palida and the Doctor were kneeling.

"Is that Madame d'Enambuc?" said he, making the sign of the cross. "By heavens, my Lord Count, you did not expect te see her so! What is it that you propose to do?"

"To bury her," replied Loinvilliers.

A quarter of an hour afterwards all the crew of the

"To bury her," replied Loinvilliers.

A quarter of an hour afterwards all the crew of the St. Nicholas, and all the pirates were assembled, barcheaded, on the deck. The chaplain, with his missal in his hand, was reciting prayers before the coffin, to which two camon-balls had been attached. The Count, kneeling against the bulwarks, was murmuring the Ds Profundis with a hourse and broken voice. After the final absolution, two men raised the coffin and threw it overboard. The deep waters splashed up with a dull sound, and, for a moment, opened wide: they closed again over the abyse, and all was ended—the Little Queen was hidden in the depths of the ocean for ever. Then the Count rose up, and turning to the Doctor, said—

"He shall never set his eyes upon her sgain, living or dead."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1861.

THE theory of our Constitution supposes that we have seventy-two members to represent the interests of the country in the Assembly. They are distributed in various electorates that the particular localities may have confidence in the general result of a session—that no forget-fulness shall sacrifice their welfare. When, owever, we turn to the division lists throughnowever, we turn to the division lists throughout the sessions, a lamentable failure at once strikes us. Rarely are two-thirds of the members present, and on many important occasions a decisive vote affecting the polley of the country has been determined by the accidental absence of an individual, and that when little that when little more than half the members were present. Had any accident brought one or two others into the Assembly it would per-haps have changed the fate of our political parties and involved the country in the difficul-tion and cost of a served exists. parties and involved the country in the difficul-ties and cost of a new election. Of course it is never supposed that the whole of the members of the House will be present. A number of causes will prevent this regularity of attend-ance. What might be the case if every man received a guinea when he made his bow, we shall not present the case. shall not pretend to say. It is not improbable, however, that the pecuniary position of members would, before long, be such as to ensure in that case, a very large attendance. It is possible, indeed, that this would not in any way contribute to the progress of the public business, or to the purity of the House. We are quite aware that there is some reason to suppose that the smaller the actual attendance, the less the amount of jobbery and corruption. It might perhaps be upon the whole an advantage were we to reduce the number of members to be em-ployed and paid. Still it is the theory that the representatives will occupy their post and perform their duty, and that habitual neglect defrauds the representation of its numerical

If, however, the division lists show a striking deficiency in actual attendance, the appearance of the House during the session has marked more fully the indifference of members to the debates. Do we indeed blame them?
Where is the human intellect that could comprehend? Where is the human patience that could endure the stereotyped platitudes of our inveterate talkers. We have long given up as incorrigible all these gentlemen, and we leave their speeches to make their way into the affections of the country, without attempting to point out their defects, or to laugh at their eccentricities. But there is this remarkable fact that while they severally demand a space in the public Press, and while ciate each other! There is some grim satisfaction in this reflection, that if any man abuses his position as an orator by inflicting an enor-mous weight of words upon his brethren they do not drop their ears, like the ass, and submit to the burden, but like him when at large post off at full speed with a contemptuous bray.

There is, notwithstanding, a class of men who acconsiderable service as memoers of the Legis-lature, and whose labours are not often appre-ciated: we mean those hard-working members who attend the committees, and thus collect information, whatever it may be worth, by which the Assembly professes to be influenced. The desertion of a large number of members of course imposes upon such men an usfair procourse imposes upon such men an unfair pro-portion of toil. Many who are quite pre-pared to deliver a speech are most impatient of the restraints of the committee-room. But there seems to be a very great proportion who neither make nor hear speeches—who perform neither the public nor the committee room services proper to their position. Although we cannot proper to their position. Although we cannot excuse any person who has undertaken the duties of a representative for the habitual neglect, it must be acknowledged that these duties are onerous and, to country members, exceedingly costly. They take a large portion of the year; they impose the expense of residence and travelling; they remove a man from all the interests of domestic life, and then, when he comes to look at the result of five year; legislation, what does he find life, and then, when he comes to look at the result of five years' legislation, what does he find to recompense the time expended or to satisfy the fair expectation of the people? Nothing is more deplorable in our political system, or more fruitful in producing its more pernicious development, than the length of our sessions. They tend naturally to create a large number of professional politicians who are interested in keeping alive party antinathies—in suggesting frequent fessional politicians who are interested in keeping alive party antipathies—in suggesting frequent Ministerial changes—in requiring almost daily acts of Government corruption. Three months is enough in all conscience for our public business, and we should be glad to see a law passed by which no session should be permitted to continue for a longer period. No doubt this would require some changes in our order of business and constitutional action, but we are certain that nothing is more fatal to liberty than the habitual neglect by large numbers of the people's representatives, and the incessant action and eternal debate of a few.

Some who were never in the House before, and who of course are full of the notion of their legislative importance, complain that our reports are too brief, and some have the folly to complain that they are insceurate! What would the complaint be were we to give the speeches of the House in extenso? In what light would many of the members appear before their constituents if we members appear before their constituents if we have the more to be disregarded, when we have the were to give a literal portraiture of their legis-lative deliverances? What schoolboy would not follow them with jeers and laughter? we are too merciful to report verbatim! It is true that another class complain of this very act of mercy. They think that we should serve the country by a verbatim report of the proceedings; but even if we were disposed to be malicious, we have still to regard the interest of our own we have still to regard the interest of our own constituents. What fun would there be after three or four days' publication in this form? Would not every man of taste revolt from the exhibition of so much ignorance? Would not every patriot blush for his country? Should t rather aggravate than improve our position in the eyes of the world? No, let us cast tion in the eyes of the world? No, let us cast a mantle over our humiliation, and recognise the self-control of the reporters, who when their risible sympathies are most keenly awakened arrest their pens and remember how sacred and venerable the Legislature of their country!

Some years ago the present Archbishop of Dublin wrote a clever little tract entitled, "Historic Doubts concerning Napoleon BONAPARTE." It was an application to the life of that celebrated man, of the canons of historical archemistration and the contraction of the canons of historical archemistration. rical criticism which the sceptics had been ap-plying to the Divine records; and it was ingeniously argued that, on the basis of the prin-ciples that were then becoming fashionable, there was no sufficient ground for believing that there was no sufficient ground for believing that any such person as NAPOLEON BONAPARE had ever existed. The present is an age of scepticism, and this scepticism is justified on the ground that the most imprudent and audacious falsehoods pass current. An instance of this wanton perversion of historical fact has been recently exhibited in the debates of our Legislatics Assembly.

lative Assembly.

The Government, with an effrontery that is altogether amazing, has actually charged the country nine thousand pounds as the cost of suppressing a riot at Burrangong, when there really was never any riot at all! At least, so it is solemnly asserted by the representatives of that particular class who were said to have got up the riot. These scentice actions liked in up the riot. These sceptics as to an alleged historical fact very consistently refused to vote money under false pretences. If there never was a riot, it is obvious that it never could have been suppressed; and if there never was any such suppressed; and it there never was any such suppression, the money either never could have been spent, or must have been spent in perpetrating a sham. Where is the proof, they ask, that there ever was a riot at Burrangong? They do not believe it, and they will not believe it unless sufficient evidence is produced to satisfy an impartial mind. The thing is obviously an impartial mind. The thing is obviously a priori improbable. It is not likely that gold-diggers would be guilty of riot. Does not everybody know that this is a "law-abiding community," and that gold-diggers particularly community. and that gold-diggers particularly are the most amenable to discipline, the most self-restrained, and the most orderly portion of the population? It will, of course, require very strong evidence therefore to convince anyone that these model colonists could have so far forgotten themselves as to rise in rebellion against the constituted authorities. The presumption is that the whole thing is a hoax, either got up by some wag in sport, or else invented by the diabolical cunning of the "enemies of the people," for the purpose of casting discredit upon emocratic institutions.

Is it wonderful that history is so difficult to write? How is the truth as to pust ages possible to be deciphered, when it is so difficult to ascertain the facts of our own generation or the very passing day? If we are misled as to the very passing day? It we are misled as to facts that pass, or profess to pass, under our very eyes, how are we to glean the truth as to facts which live only in musty records? Here for instance we have our Legislative Assembly disputing as to whether there ever was such a thing as a riot at Burrangong; the Government positively asserting that there was, and that it cost them wine thousand neurals to not it. positively asserting that there was, and that it cost them nine thousand pounds to put it down, and the "friends of the people" as positively repelling the foul calumny, and wehemently asserting that there was never anything of the kind. How are we to get at the truth? How is the future historian of Australia to get at the truth? Where is the evidence? Let it be produced, if it can. Mr. Cowper has been asked to consent to an enquiry, and has refused. In not this primu facts evidence that he knows he is bolstering up a faisehood, and that an enquiry would explode the whole delusion? If the fact were as represented, would there be any objecwere as represented, would there be any objection to the most rigid investigation of its reality?

And if this investigation is refused, does it not of itself afford a strong proof that the Minis-terial story will not bear looking into?

It is, of course, no evidence in the that hitherto nearly everybody in the colony thought there had been such a riot, because thought there had been such a riot, because the sales and the contrast set easily cause it is notorious how false reports get easily believed. As to telegrams, who would pin his faith to telegrams? Who does not remember in the Crimean war the false report that got abroad that Sebastopol had been taken, and the rejoicings that were incident thereto? when it turned out after all that the defences were as tropicings that were incident thereto? when it turned out after all that the defences were as tough, and as untouched as ever. It is clear that the people must not be defamed on the faith of lying telegrams. We must have better evidence than that. Where are the eye witnesses? For if there was a riot, somebody must have seen it. If there was a riot some one must have been guilty of it. But who was guilty? If any one surely the ringleaders, and Government who professed to know all about it, must know not only who the ringleaders were but what they did. Government, to give the hoax an appearance of reality, did, indeed, specify three men as ringleaders, and offered a reward of a hundred pounds apiece for their conviction. But these men, having been apprehended, has it not been acknowledged that there is no charge against them? If, then, the ringleaders have been guilty of nothing in the slightest degree fineable or punishable, how can their followers have been guilty of anything so serious as riot? It is true that at the Goulburn assizes, one man out of many accused was, on serious as not man out of many accused was, on enquiry, said to be guilty. But as this verdict was brought about only by the extra-judicial efforts of a "bloody JEFFREYS;" extra-judicial efforts of a "bloody JEFFREYS;" and as the Government were resolved to secure at least one conviction, in order to afford some support to the infamous hoax they had perpetrated, no one will attach much weight to that single conviction. One man cannot make a riot, and as it is not pretended that he was a chief actor, or a whit worse than hundreds of others who accompanied him, this solitary conviction is very small evidence to support the grave charges made against the diggera—if this is all there is to produce. And what other evidence is there forthcoming. Of course, no one would believe the Chinese, who may be supposed to have trumped up the charge for the purpose of getting some compensation. Nor the more to be disregarded, when we have the most positive assurances that nothing could have been more orderly and peaceful than those temperate remonstrances on the part of the gold-diggers, which have been wickedly distorted into a riot. As to the man Lupron, alleged to have been shot, there probably never was such a man, and his story was invented only to give a greater appearance of fact to the

Is it not wonderful that the colony should have been deluded so long into the belief that there had been a disgraceful riot? How satisfactory to find that the waole thing has been a dream, an invention of the brain, a hideous nightmare, and that we can now wake up and find it false! What a comfort it is to discover that the character of our people remains untarnished; and yet how strange that, in spite of this discovery, the Government persists in treating the fiction as a fact, and that Parliament assists it in maintaining the monstrous delusion!

THE LATE BOAT ACCIDENT.—The city coroner held an inquest at the Forth and Clyde Inn, Balmain, yesterday, on the body of a man named Edward Anthony, aged thirty-eight years, who, as stated in our issue of yesterday, vas drowned by the sinking of a boat in Waterview Bay, on Saturday last. It appeared from the evidence that, early in the afternoon of Saturday, a man named Nicoll, a plumber, employed by the P. and O. Company, in company with a carpenter named Pritchard, also employed by the P. and O. Company, and the docased, who was second steward of the mail steamer Salestte, went for a sail in a beat belonging to Nicoll, intending to go round to see the Balmain regatts. The boat was fourteen feet long, rather low, and, it would appear, was over-masted. The boat made one board toward the Ottopany's caldepot, and then tacked and stood toward the other point of Balmain. The wind blew rather fresh at the time, and the boat took in a good deal of water, when it was decemed advisable to bear up for the shore. The helm was accordingly put up and the sheet slacked off, when the boat teld of, rolled heavily, (there being a considerable quantity of water in her), took in water on both sides, and went down by the stern. All three men could swim, and they at once struck out for the shore, but a minute or two afterwards the deceased was missed, and as a beat was consing toward them, Pritchard told the persons in it to look after the missing man, as himself and Nicoll could swim for the minute of two afterwards the deceased you in a b

This was the way that the case presented itself upon the evidence for the prosecution alone; but, when the evidence for the defence came to be taken into account, the matter became different, for the two so completely contradicted each other, that the jury could come to no other conclusion than that the one or the other side was perjured. November, at Sydney, did felonionally and wilfully kill and slay her infant child, George King.

Mr. Butler prosecuted on behalf of the Crown; and prisoner was undefended.

It appeared from the evidence that late on the night of the 18th, prisoner, who was following a loose course of life, was apprehended by the police, drunk in the streets, and was taken to the female watch-house; she had with her her infant, then about a month old, which was locked up with her in a cell; between five and six o'clock on the moraing of the 18th, a woman who was confined in the ame cell with prisoner knocked at the cell door, and called the watch-house keeper's attention to prisoner's child; the infant appeared to be suffering severely, and the watch-house keeper sent the mother and child, under charge of a constable, to Dr. Aaron, who was then doing duty for Dr. Rutter, the police surgeon; by the time they reached there the child was dead; on examining the body it was found to be very much emaciated, and a post morten examination showed the stomach to be quite void of food; at the time prisoner had a good supply of milk in her besasts.

It was shown, however, that prisoner was of weak intellect, and that she had been three times received into the Benevicent Asylum, for madness, and all of the witnesses spoke of her as being a woman of weak intellect. At the hour advertised for the meeting, there were fourteen persons present; subsequently the number increased to about fifty.

Upon the metion of Mr. Banken, the Speaker of the Lepislative Assembly was voted to the chair, and opened the proceedings by reading the advertisement convening the meeting, and by alinding to the proceedings of the previous meetings. He had moved the adjournment of a former meeting, and had recommended that due notice of the adjournment should be given to subscribers. He repretted that so few subscribers were present, but he did not see what advantage would be guined by a further adjournment. At the meeting at which it was first determined to present to Mr. Wentworth a testimonial in the form of a statue, it was suggested that it should be placed in one conspicuous place in the city of the status being placed in the University, and thought a more suitable place would be the Government Botanic Gardens. It was nower for the meeting to decide as to where the status should be placed.

Captain Noirri then rose and proposed that the status should be placed.

Captain Noirri then rose and proposed that the status of Mr. Wentworth should be placed in flight Park. If it were likely to suffer from exposure to the weather, a small extagon temple with place-glass sides, night be made for it. Every inhabitant of the city could then see it. But who would go out to the University to see it. If not in Hyde Park, it ought to be in some prominent place.

Mr. BALUS seconded the resolution.

Mr. HOLLI moved as an amendment that the status should be placed in the Sydney University, It would be very soon destroyed if exposed to the sea air. He did not believe it would be hidden if taken to the University, as that building was now, and always would be, a popular place of recert. The Mus hundred visitors. It was open to the public, and he often had the pleasure of showing working men over the binding.

Mr. Cervits said, if it should turn out that the statue of Mr. Wentworth would be injured by exposure to the air, the public who had contributed to the testimonial, would be very much disappointed. The general feeling was, that the statue should be placed in some prominent site. The University would always be regarded as one of Mr. Wentworth's greatest works.

Mr. TUNES suggested that a committee should be appointed to enquire what would be the effect of exposing the statue in the open air, whether it would be injured or not. It was very desirable that scientific enquiry should be taken on the point.

Mr. H. O'BRIDS considered that the subscribers should be willing to consult Mr. Wentworth's wishes as to where his statue should be placed. It was quite time that the University was not now within the city of Sydney, but protably within fifty years the extension of the population would bring the University in a more central position. The measument had been contributed to on account of Mr. Wentworth's public services, and he had stated that he would prefer it should be placed in the University.

2.1. G. BENNET referred to a conversation he had had with Mr. Patten, who had thirty vears' experience of the durability of marthe, and who had told him that there was no singer whatever should the statue be exposed to the init, as the Australian climate was the linest in the world for the improvement of marble, and it would have the effect of blacking it, and of making it more tirm. The statue cupicl, the thought, to be placed in the University until the natives of the colony to imitate his example.

Major Chilsteria would prefer, on account of Mr. Wentworth's connexion with the Parliament of the country, that the statue should be placed in the University until the new Parliament shouls be placed in the University until the new Parliament shouls be placed in the University until the new Parliament shouls be Anaboriber enquired whether, as it was originally inAnaboriber enquired whether, as it was originally inAnabod to erect a status to Mr. Wentworth in the city of Sydney, it would be competent to place it in a building which was outside the city.

The Chairman said that that objection might fairly be taken, but it was rather of a technical character.

Mr. CURTES feared that if a glass case were made for the statue, it would be a great temptation to the boys to break the glass.

Mr. BOWDEN said it should be remembered that the statue was not a colossal one, and was only six inches atue was not a colossal one, and was only six inches igher than life.

The URAIRMAN considered it was not competent to the abscribers to decide that the statue should after a certain me be placed in the Houses of Parliament, as these were of yet commenced, and would not probably be finished for any years to come.

The Hon. W. RUSSELL, M.L.C., thought the meeting hould defer to Mr. Wentworth's opinion on the matter. The CHAIRMAN said he had had a long conversation with Mr. Wentworth on the matter, but the arguments Mr. Wentworth used had not affected his (the chairman's) view of the case.

he declared the numbers to be: For the resonance, and against it, 11.

Mr. BARKER then handed to the Chairman a number of proxies of subscribers who were unable to attend.

Major CHAIRMEN: Seeing that Mr. Leslie is dead, that is another objection. (Laughter.)

The meeting decided against receiving the proxy.

The CHAIRMAN said he was in some doubt with regard to another proxy—that of Mr. Nainby, of Maitland, who desired to record his vote in favour of placing the statue in the Botanic Gardens or the Domain, unless it should be taken to the wish of Mr. Wentworth that it should be taken to the wish of Mr. which case he would defer to that wish. Now he (the chairman) considered that the meeting had no official intimation of Mr. Wentworth's wishes in the matter.

official intimation of Mr. Wentworth's wishes in the matter.

Mr. Barker stated, as treasurer to the Testimonial Fund, that Mr. Wentworth had expressed his wish to have his status placed in the University.

After some discussion as to how Mr. Nainty's letter should be received, the motion was put to the meeting, and carried by a majority, that it should be taken in favour of placing the status in some public site.

The Chainana having stated that he had thrown out a proxy presented by Mr. James Macarthur's attorney, as not heing in accordance with the terms of the advertisement; declared that there were twenty-one proxies in tavour of placing the status in the University, and twenty for putting it in some public place. These numbers, added to the previous division, gave a majority in favour of the original resolution for placing the statue in some public site within the city. The amendment was received with cheers.

Mr. Barkers protested against the chairman's decision as to the proxies.

Mr. BARKER protested against the chairman's decision as to the proxise.

Mr. Turks then proposed a resolution, which after some conversational discussion, was amended in the following form and unanimously agreed to:—"That the following gentlemen be a committee to select the most suitable site for the statuse within the city of Sydney, and also to inspect the statuse and otherwise obtain information as to whether it will hear exposure to the weather, and report to a meeting of the subscribers — Mr. T. A. Murray, Mr. Holt, Mr. Scott Ross, the Rev. Dr. Woolley, Mr. Tunks, Mr. G. Bennett, and Major Christie.

A discussion ensued as to whether it would not be necessary for the meeting to empower the committee just chosen, to see to the landing of the statue, and to take all further responsibilities as to its destination; it was at length understood that the committee would undertake these responsibilities.

bilities. A vote of thanks was then given, by acclamation, by the meeting, to Mr. Barker, for his services in reference to the Westworth testimonial. A vote of thanks to Mr. Murray, for his conduct in the chair, terminated the proceedings.

MANNIO TESTIMONIAL.—A meeting of the subscribers to the Manning Testimonial, was held at Mr. Bradley's effice, Margaret-street, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of deciding upon a proposal to place the portrait of bir William Manning in the hall of the University. The chair was taken by Mr. R. K. Knox, and it was proposed by Mr. T. Barker, seconded by Mr. Rolleston, and carried, that the portrait be placed in the hall of the University.

The Paddington school, which is held in a commedious structure, near the Wesleyan chapel, is divided into what is termed the large school and the inlant school—under the charge of Mr. Johrson, as master; rand Miss Riyan, as mistrees; assisted by pull teachers Mr. Hicks, and Miss Brown. Owing to the almost incessant rain, not more than 130, scholars were present, the inclemency of the weather also materially interfering with the attendance of visators. The two slasses of the infant school were first cananized in reading, writing, scripture, history, and singing, &c., and acquitted themselves cruditably, the canamination of the sider pupils being subsequently proceeded with. The large school is divided into four classes. The first (or junior classes was examined by Mr. Wilkins, in reading, writing, geography, and English grammar. The proficiency of the second class in their more advanced studies of the same subjects was next tested, after which the third class was examined in reading, grammar, analysis of sentences, physical geography, arithmetic, proportion, practice, vulgar fractions, dectimals, simple equations, and mensuration. The fourth (or highest class) last occupied the attention of the examiner, their curriculum being the same as that of the third class, with the additional item of quadratic equations. Mr. Wilkins expressed himself much satisfied with the result of the examination, the children having exidently been very carefully instructed by the Board to take charge of some important educational establishment in the interior.

In the meanwhite the excitenent and impatience of the croad to obtain a view of Mr. King had grown beyond all centrel, and cries were constantly raised for his appearance at the windows or the summit of the entrance porch. THE LACHLAN.

THE LACHLAN.

[PRON OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

NOVEMBLE 22.—I send you a telegram to-day via Bathurst, with all news of any importance. Numbers are leaving here for Lambing Flat. From what I hear there are fully 5000 Chinese at the Wombat, and great numbers are still making for the Flat. I fully expect to see a larger population on the Flat than ever. They have again struck excellent ground on the Main Creek. This place, without they succeed in striking something payable during the next week or so, will be a complete failure. Those that are fortunate enough to be on the patch have claims equal to Ballarst, but I have no opinion of its lasting any time. The late secounts from New Z-aland are taking numbers away. Great numbers of Victorians have arrived, but at present there is no chance for them. This is a great pity; the great mistake made in reporting these fields is that the public generally have not been given to understend that all the great finds have been made in about a quarter of a mile of ground. I really do not think there are more than 360 at the very outside here getting gold. The difference in the appearance of this place during the last few days is something extraordinary; building sites, that a week since were worth £50, now are not saleable.

The following letter respecting the Lachlan was received vesterday, by a gentleman in town:—

Tumut, November 29.

Some of the reports about the Lachlan which I saw in the papers are abaurd. I have just returned from there. I have no doubt it is very rich in a few places. In about twenty of twenty-five claims they are getting gold and employ about 200 men, and some may be worth from £200 to £6000each, but it is ridiculous to talk about getting half a cwt. of gold in a day. If nothing else is found at the Lachlan, very soon you will hear a very different report. There are thousands walking about doing nothing, and don't know what to do.

SHEEP-SHEARING.—The Cowra correspondent of the Bathurst Free Press writes to that journal as follows.—Most of the settlers have done, and considerable quantities of wool begin to come through the town. I have visited a good many of the sheds, and the general remark is that the flocks have shorn very well: from 25, lbs. to 31 lbs. I think may be stated as the average clip per sheep throughout this neighbourhood; the sheep, however, are, generally, not in good order. Considerable numbers of young sheep have been sold to Northern dealers and Queenland quutters, at prices varying from 10s. to 11s. 9d. per head without the wool. I saw a lot of 1000 wethers, averaging 60 lbs., that were sold at the Lachista diggings; five sheep are to be had down that way; cattle, however, are very plentiful.

MAIL-COACH ACCIDENTS.—On Thursday evening, an accident, fortunately attended by no serious consequences, happened te the Sydney mail on its way to Goulburn. When a little on the other side of Wingrello, the driver, in order te give himself mere command over his team in clearing a log which lay in his way, stood up. The hind wheel of the vehicle, however, came in contact with the log, and the concussion dislodged him, bringing him to the ground with the reina in his hands. The horses bolted among the timeler, but ran only a very short distance before the coach was brought up against a free, and the team was set at liberty by the breaking of the tackling. One gentleman, unfortunately for himself and his charge, lespt from the coach when he observed that the driver had lost command over the horses, taking with him a young ledy passenger. Both parties fell heavily to the ground, and Dr. Waugh was sent for to attend the lady, who, we are happy to learn, has not sustained any serious injury. The other passengers escaped wholly unhurt, and the team being caught, and the coach temporarily patched up, the mail arrived in Goulburn very little behind its usual time.—The Yass mail, too, on the same evening, had the pole broken on its way to Goulburn, but no damage was done to any of the passengers; and in connection with the Collector mail, an accident also happened the same ovening. It appears that Mr. Gannon, solicitor, of Goulburn, who was returning from Quesnheyan, had consented to bring on the mail-bags with a pack-horse, the driver of the Collector coach not being able to find his horses; and Mr. Gannon having delivered the bags at the post office, was proceeding through the Market-square, when the horse he was riding suddenly missed his footing and came down with his rider, who was unseated, and considerably bruised by his fall.—Goulburn Chromicle.

Shall the All England Eleven come to Gouldwar Chronicle of Saturday says. A letter appeared in this journal, a few issues back, in which a gentleman of influence, and himself an enthusiastic cricketer, broached this interesting question. We are happy to observe that his remarks have not been lost, and that in several parts of the district, as evidenced by correspondence in the local papers, the matter appears to have excited some interest. We cannot believe that the expenses of the undertaking are greater than could be met by a very moderate subscription from the cricketers and admirers of cricket in the Southern districts, and if the verposal fall to the ground, this will be the effect not of inablity, but of a lack of public spirit in our various Southern communities. To dilate on the advantages of such an exhibition as a game at cricket with eleven of perhaps the best players in the world, and a Southern company would be useless; but there is an argument which may, perhaps, find a readler reception with the tradesugen of Gouldurn, tima any reasonings founded on the interests of physical philosophy—and that is that the bringing of the All England Eleven to Gouldurn would be, commercially speaking, a safe and paying speculation. Business men could not but be benefited to a considerable extent, by the influx of visitors, which such a speakacle would draw to the town, while the whole public would enjoy a sight, the valuable fruits of which would be eridenced in many an after year by the greater interest fall amongst our youths in a game, whose every tendency is in the direction of making them happier men and better citizens.

Your committee having given much consideration to the following Second Progress Report:—

Your committee having given much consideration to the bill haid before them, initialed. "A Bill to further amend the Law of Property and to relieve Trustees," find, upon examination, that, except sea clauses 24 and 25 th the amended bill, and clause 82 as printed in the original, now clause 33 of the present bill, is an adoption of corresponding provisions to those contained in the following Imperial statutes:—22 and 23 Vict., c 35, passed on 23rd July, 1860, and 25 and 24 Vict., c. 145, passed on 28rd July, 1860, and 25 and 24 Vict., c. 145, passed on 28rd July, 1860, and 25 and 24 Vict., c. 145, passed on 28rd August, 1860, and that the several provisions of the said Acts will be great amendments of the several portions of the law to which they respectively relate, and that if adopted in this clony, trustees, executors, mortgagees, and other persons, will receive enlarged and very useful bowers of executing the trusts and duties imposed upon them, by the several decids and instruments creating their respective crusts and mortgages.

Your committee have adopted the 24th and 25th clauses, as suggested by Sir W. M. Manning, for the further amendment of the law as to mortgages; and the 52nd—alsuse introduced by the Attorney-General into the bill as laid before the Council—adopting the principle of the Imperial Statute 4 and 6 W. 4, c. 29, as to the substitution of investments between the mother country and the colony, subject to the restrictions appearing in such clause.

syrup, because it is narrily probable that a norrice is likely to produce sugar. Then weigh this syrup, deducting therefrom one-fifth for melasses, and thereby a practical test is afforded of the produce of sugar per aces. And still simpler than this process—heat the cance between the joints until they are soft; then bend them, and a small portion of the juice will exande. Heat this as before directed; first measuring it, and thereby a test of the richness of their saccharine matter is obtained. Lands capable of producing the greatest crops of maize are those suitable for the sugar-cane.

In New Orleans, the first sugar plantation, formed sufficiently large to make four hundred one sugar per ansium, produced only molasses for some years, and that produce paid the owner infinitely more than cotton, &c., did. In five years afterwards, all the cotton-growers in that tocality became sugar-planters. The same result took place in the Island of Maurities.

The number of shearers is much more numerous than has ever been known since the gold discovery. The wages given are, we believe, 2s. 6d. a sore, being 6d. less than hast year. A LBERNI SAW MILLS, BARKLY SOUND.

September 1, 1861.

We beg leave to advise you that we are now prepared to deliver cargoes of lumber, squared timber, and spars of all dimensions, and at short notice.

The timber cut at our mills is similar to that of Puget Sound, being Douglas pine, or better known as Oregon yellow pine, and we are also prepared to shiply spruce hemlock, white pine, and cedar, if required.

Barkly Sound is easy of access, and is about twenty miles north of the straits of St. Juan de Fuca. Cape Beale forms the eastern side of the Sound, and is in latitude 48.48 N., longitude 125 12 W.

The advantage in ordering vessels to proceed to our mills, instead of those on Puget Sound, will at once be apparent on examining the chart; by avoiding the long and tedious passage of the straits of St. Juan de Fuca, the voyage will be fully shortened at weeks.

Vessels of the largest size can proceed direct to our mills, and lay alongside a safe and commodious wharf, free of charge.

The mill will saw one hundred thousand feet of lumber per day; we guarantee it to be of first quality, and full dimensions. Those familiar with the lumber imported from Puget Sound, are well aware that it is invariably less than the specified dimensions. Tongued and grooved lumber manufactured at our mills, will be of full dimensions, exclusive of tongue. The price of lumber at the Alberni Mills will be fully as low as the rates charged at the mills on Puget Sound.

All orders should be sent to Mesars. Faltner, Bell, and Co., San Francisco, California, who act as agents for our mills.

Co., San Francisco, California, who act as agents for our mills.

The port of Alberni is a free port. Vessels will not be subject to port charges, and can clear at place of loading. Captain Richards, of R.B.M. surveying ship Heests, has just completed the re-survey of Barkly Sound, and the chart will be published shortly by the Admiralty. Cargoes may be indented for through GILCHRIST, WAIT, and Co., Sydney.

MESERS. W. DEAN and Co. beg to inform their friends and the public generally that they are now prepared to undertake the sale of Wool, Tallow, Hides, &c., in the centre Circuit Quay Free Stors, where there is excellent storage for every description of produce.

From W. D. and Co.'s long colonial experience, they feel confident of being able to carry out, satisfactorily, all sales with, which they may be favoured.

PRODUCE STORES. — Mesers. DURHAM and IRWIN are prepared to receive wool, sheepskins, tallow, hides, dr., for sale by saction or privately, at their Produce Stores, Circular Quay.

Liberal advances made on wool, sheepskins, tallow, and hides consigned to them for sale or shipment.

The Genuine DR. James Powder.—In this changeable climate, COUGHS and COLDS, if neglected, too often prove fatal. Influenza invades our cities, towns, and villages, and carries off thousands yearly. These are modified types of fever, of every kind; all are caused by checked perspiration.

A medicine which, by acting on the skin, will restore the natural flow of that secretion, is therefore what is needed in those diseases and all kinds of fever.

ALVANIZED TINNED IRON TILES.—MoreCALVANIZED TINNED IRON TILES.—MoreCI wood and Rogers patent, On SALE.

Roofing Tiles, 3 feet 2 feet. These form a very light, and at the same time strong, roof: the rafters may be 3 feet 6 inches apart, and the battens 2 feet 8 inches apart. They are very valuable for country use, as the tiles may be laid with facility by any ordinary workman. The weight of a roof covered with tinned iron tiles ranges from 90 lb. to 130 lb. per square of 100 feet, while a square of slates weight about half a ton; this lightness effects a great awing in the timber and general fabric of a building, and makes a roof of this needs the most economical that cas be erected. The tilles, if required, may be laid over old shingles, thus asaving the expense and tisk of stripping the roof.

Galvanized Iron Ridgeapping. This is well adapted for either iron, slated, or ahingled roofs, and is the cheapost and most durable capping that can be used.

The Gull'h Discounce.—Under date 25th ultimo, the Moruya correspondent of the Braulecool Observer writes:—The reports from this field during the last week were of the most cheering character, and would indicate the opening of a new era in the history of the piace. The digring operations, as is well-knewn, have gradually expanded from the township (Nerrigundah) over several miles of country, and have in some of the guilies proved more or less remunerative. On some of the outlying ranges, above the claim generally known as Poppenhagen's, a party alighted on some extraordinary finds for this part of the country about nine days ago. At the end of the first day of their bottoming they had netted as much as ferty ounces of gold, and their good fortune continued over two or three other days, but with gradually decreasing results. This report may, I believe, be relied on, as it reached here by a highly respectable party from the immediate neighbourhood of the field, and has been confinued since by other and independent testimonies. It is soarcely necessary to add that the report has caused hereabouts more than ordinary excitement.—The largest nugget as yet discovered on this field was dug up by a party at work near Woollier's store in the ourse of last week. The name of the lucky finder has not transpired, but of the fact them seems to be no doubt. The nugget is described as being remarkably pure, and weighing fully seventeen ounces.

THE PURLIG HEALTH.—We regret to state that diphtheria and searistina are prevalent throughout the district, and more especially at Major's Creek and the Araluen.—

THE BRITISH DEPENDENCIES AND THE EXHIBITION OF 1862.

It appears from the Times that in the Exhibition of next year there will be such a show of colonial products and manufactures as has never yet been gathered under one roof before. All, even to our most distant dependencies, are making such offerts to be well represented next year as almost apparently to surpass the interest taken in the scheme at home:—
The Canadian Government has voted 25000 toward to severe the interest taken in the scheme at home:—
The Canadian Government has voted 25000 toward to severe the property of presenting that grand coloning the propertion of gold; Victoria gives $10,000; New Bouth Wales, £3000, and £5000 for an exhibition of gold; Victoria gives $10,000; New Branswick, £1600; Hritish Guines, £1000, and proportionate sums will be voted by nearly all the other colonial Legislatures throughout the world. The idea of the gold exhibition of the Australian colonies is an admirable one. For the first time the English public will see a property ranged and classified exhibition of the various deposits of the precious metal, the discovery of which has it ten short years raised Australia from the position of an outlying colony and convict depot to a series of power-tul and wealthy states. It is not to be a mere display for many of the various forms in which the rich auriferous yield is found, but a converted the surface of the searth. Towards this display New South Wales gold quant of every given the series of power to a series of power in a repution of pure naugests on the surface of the searth. Towards this display New South Wales gives £1000, and the sextinence of Victoria £2000, and the sextinence of Victoria £2000 in the series of power in a repution of pure naugests on the surface of the searth. Towards this display New South Wales gives £1000, and the sextinence of Victoria £2000 and the sor is it only in Victoria that we see this astounding progress is the ten years that have intervened. Port Phillip, which in 1851 had only just been erected into a separate colony, is now the great settlement of the group. Moreton Bay has within the last two years become a great prosperous, and independent colony, under the name of Queenaland; Van Diemen's Land no longer exists, but in its stead is the wealthy and thiving astillates. now the great settlement of the group. Moreton Bay has within the last two years become a great prosperous, and independent colony, under the name of Queenaland; Van Diemen's Land no longer exists, but in its stead is the wealthy and thriving settlement of Tasmania; and even the beautiful Norfolk Islands are no more the most dreaded of all the penal settlements, but have been colonised by the Pitcairn Islanders, to whom a romantic interest still attaches as the descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty, who kept up their primitive simplicity and isolation till they outgrew the limits of their first island home. We live fast now-a-days, and ten years is a huge epoch in the rapid history of colonial enterprise and progress. There are now railways and telegraphs to towns in Australia which, ton years back, were only stations with sheep tracks through the bush. Steamers are plying on the Murraya and the Darling, and Queenaland, British Columbia, and Vancouver's Island have, since the last exhibition, been admitted into that great family of communities which constitute the gigantic empire of the British colonies. If there are any among the members of this system of dependencies which show less zeal in the Exhibition than the rest, they are to be found among the West Indian colonies. Sugar now, and cotton for the future, seem not unnaturally to occupy all their thoughts at present, and more interest is evinced among the people of the Sandwich Islands, at Hayti, in Japan, the South Sea Islands, the Fijis, in Liberia, and along the settlements of the West Coast of Africa, than among the inhabitants of the greatest of the Antilles. Mr. Rutherford Alcock is sending home a superb collection of objects from Japan, principally of China lacquer ware, and textile fabrics, with scientific and agricultural implements, raw products, &c. To this display her Majesty will contribute from the Windsor arassury the magnificent weapons and armour which were larely sent to her as a present from the Tycoon. Our Indian empire was last ti

THE GREAT GORILLA CONTROVERSY. THE GREAT GORILLA CONTROVERSY.

"AFRICANUS," writing upon this much deleated subject to the Times, on the 23rd of September, says:—

The opponents of M. Du Chaillu are, I find, again in the field; Dr. John Edward Gray being, of course, once more the leader of the forlorn hope. No man is equal to the learned gentleman when an impracticable breach is to be stormed or an impassable rampart to be scaled. As keeper of the stuffed beasts and birds in the Museum, he is now in possession of the great gorilla that fought the duel with M. Du Chaillu, and having carefully examined it. after the skilful orrea in the Museum, he is now in possession of the great gorills that fought the duel with M. Du Chaillu, and having carefully examined it, after the skilful manipulations of the person that set him up, he addressed a letter to the President of the Zoolsgical Society of the British Association, telling him that he (Dr. Gray) is cock-sure that the baboon was wounded not in front, but from behind; and consequently, that there is not a word of truth in the marrative of its combat with M. Du Chaillu. Professor Owen, and backed by Sir Phillip Grey Egerton, a man of science, and as skilful and experienced a deer-stalker as the Prince Consort himself, had examined the skin and shattered vertebre before the manipulation, and contradicting Dr. Gray, are clearly of opinion that the Gorilla, like an old Roman, received his wound in front. In this rather obscure matter I prefer the judgment of the first comparative anatomist in Europe, to that of a man who does not profess to be an anatomist at all, and that of a kilful sportsman to that of one who probably never shot anything more considerable than a hedge-sparrow sitting.

But. Dr. Grav has at length got an auxiliary by protess to be an antenmat at all, and that of a skilful aportaman to that of one who probably never ahot anything more considerable than a hedge-sparrow sitting.

But, Dr. Gray has at length got an auxiliary by whose help M. Du Chaillu is to be utterly crushed. Our traveller had referred to a Mr. Walker for corroboration of the fidelity of his narrative, and the letter of a Mr. Walker appeared, within the last few days, in the columns of one of your contemporaries, denouncing M. Du Chaillu—in details to which I shall presently refer—as a scandalous impostor. But not so fast, Dr. Gray. The Walker who vituperates M. Du Chaillu is R. B. Walker, a trapper at the Gaboon; and the gentleman referred to by the traveller is the Rev. William Walker in M. Du Chaillu's time an American missionary at the Gaboon, and now vesiding in Georgia. The letter of the latter has been published, and in it he tells M. Du Chaillu that his book is read in Georgia, and that he is himself glad to be present "to testify to the truth of its statements." M. Du Chaillu, therefore, is not put out of court, as was hoped, by the witness he had himself called to character.

But, strangely enough, it happens that there are two Walkers to bear testimony to the truth of M. Du Chaillu's narrative, and that R. B. Walker, the now vituperator, is one of them. Last spring two letters of this gentleman—the one dated 1858, and the other 1859, both from the Gaboon—were read by his own brother-in-law at one of the meetings of the Ethnological Society, and they are now published. Both speak very handsomely, indeed, of M. Du Chaillu, and, as a sample, are given the following from his last: —"He" (M. Du Chaillu)

"Is a very nice little fellow, and he will amuse you with his description of tribes and people who never yet have been seen by another white man but himself. As you will see him in a few months, I will not forestall him by recording any of his adventures here. He is no boaster, and I for one place confidence in all he has told me, and I consider that wh

R. B. Walker has a cock-and-bull story about an emigrant French ship, among the many passengers in which M. Du Chaillu had asserted that there were parties consisting of no fewer than thirty-eight different tribes, speaking as many different languages. Nothing more probable than this, seeing that the emigrants were really slaves brought from many remote parts of a region, every glen, brook, or mountain side of which has its own tribe and language. The candid "R. B." would have us to understand that the fact is stated by M. Du Chaillu on the authority of his own personal examination, which would imply a knowledge of thirty-eight languages. Mr. Walker distorts and overstates his case, and thereby makes himself both fabulcus and ridiculous. Ignorance of the African languages is one of the charges made by R. B. Walker against M. Du Chaillu; but for this we have only the assurance of a man who has distinguabed himself, and we are accordingly warranted in refusing to place the slightest teliance on it. This is followed by ignorance of sketching, of astronomy, and of geography. All this may be passed unnoticed as impertinence, since M. Du Chaillu has made no pretence of being arrist, astronomer, or scientific geographer. He boasts of being an enterprising traveller, a sportsman, and a successful collector of rare objects of natural history. He does not even venture to call himself anaturalist, although Mr. Walker, in the very first words of his first letter, not only calls him a naturalist, but "an enterprising naturalist." Utless gifted with a very thick skin, unless—to use a term of natural history—pachydermatous—one would not, after such revelations as these, wish to be in the skins of John Edward Gray and R. B. Walker. One of your contemporaries calls on Sir Roderick Murchison and Professor Owen to apologies to the public for introducing M. Du Chaillu have by their blunders not only relieved them from all responsibility, but justified their protection.
